The Digital Library needs no physical boundary; you can get access to information all over the world through the internet connection. It can be accessed at any time, 24/7. Same resources can be used at the same time by a lot of users which is called multiple access.

It provides the right to use much richer content in a more structured manner i.e. you can easily move from one particular catalog to another particular chapter. An exact copy of the original can be made multiple times without any waste in quality. It does not need much more space because digital information requires very little physical space to contain them. One digital library can create a link to any other resources of other digital libraries in a very convenient way.

The maintenance cost of a digital library is cheaper than a traditional library. It gives user-friendly interfaces, giving clickable access to its resources through <https://ndl.iitkgp.ac.in/>
